

BRRR!
IT'S COLD OUTSIDE!
WHATEVER SHALL WE DO?

Okay, so you're not cold unless someone has the AC turned up way too high. But we're asking that you dig deep into your interpretive coat pockets and pull out all your cold-weather activities for our next Region 4 Booklet: Winter. Don't be shy about what you submit – please, the more submissions the better! We challenge each one of you to send in a submission and give a friendly elbow to your favorite interpreter to send in their submission.

Topic ideas include (but are not limited to):

- Winter adaptations.
- Programs in the snow.
- Programs and ideas about how to interpret: winter, cold weather, snowflakes, hibernation, migration, tracking, how to dress, winter recreation, insulation – and more!
- How you handle warm days in winter, or severe weather days.
- Problems you've faced and overcome, things you've tried and you suggest others NOT do, and your funny "What was I thinking!?" stories.
- Resources to find more great winter stuff.

Submissions should be ideas or programs you have developed from scratch or modified from a published source. We cannot republish activities published in sources such as Project WILD. Your submissions can be whole program write-ups or even just one-line activities and ideas. You can include your submissions in an e-mail or attach as a Word document. Please send your submissions to Carly Martin at cam@clevelandmetroparks.com. You can call her with questions at 440-247-7075. It's never too early to send submissions, but please try to have them to Carly by November 7th.
